WHITE PLAINS.

From the way things are shaping it seems probable that the investigation of the administration of Miles Adams as Superintendent of the Poor will shortly be settled by his making restitution of all money claimed to have been paid out improperly him during his term of office. The opinion gen-erally expressed is that Miles Adams was gulity of carelessness in the conduct of his office, and trusted too much to Timothy C. Adams, his brother; but there is no evidence to show that Miles Adams benefited personelly by the overcharges and system of fraudulent accounts that have been exposed by the investigations of the special commit-tee of the Board of Supervisors. Timothy C. Adams transacted the business and Miles Adams signed the drafts. When the exposure came Timothy C. Adams disappeared from view, and Miles Adams was left to bear the brunt of the storm. It is comforting for the taxpayers to know that they will get the most of their money back, and that the affairs of the office of Superintendent of the Poor are now being conducted upon a system which will make it more difficult in the future for any one to take advantage of implicit confidence.

POOLS IN A BOARDING-HOUSE.

CAPTAIN SMITH CAPTURES ELEVEN MEN IN EAST FIFTEENTH-ST.

LIVELY SCENES AT THE RAID-ONE FUGITIVE STUMBLES ON A SLEEPING LODGER AND

IS PUMMELLED FOR A BURGLAR. Captain Elbert O. Smith and nineteen detectives and policemen, dressed in citizens' clothes, made a raid yesterday afternoon upon No. 105 East Fifteenth-st., which is run by Mrs. Emma Hanf as a theatrical boarding-house, and discovered a pool-room in full swing on the ground floor. The house is directly opposite the Hotel Jefferson and within a stone's throw of the Irving Place Theatre. Thirteen men were in the room when the raid was made and all were captured but two, who made their escape through the rear windows. While the prisoners were being removed in the patrol wagon the street was crowded with specta-tors, and a good deal of excitement prevailed outside the house as well as within.

Information which reached Captain Smith last Monday first led him to suspect the place. Detectives Rink and Stephens were sent out to shadow the house, and soon concluded that it was not being conducted merely as a boarding-house. They went to the roof of an adjoining building and saw from that position that a wire ran from the roof of the boarding-house to a window of the rear parlor. On receiving their report, Captain Smith decided to make the raid without waiting for a warrant.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon he left the East Twenty-second-st. station, followed at intervals by Detectives Stephens, Rink, Conroy and Coleman as well as fifteen policemen in citizens' clothes. Six of the policemen met the captain at Fourthave., between Fifteenth and Sixteenth sts., where they received their instructions and were told to wait for a signal the captain was to give if everything went right. Three other policemen wer told to seat themselves in Union Square, so as to keep the boarding-house in view.

The captain stationed the six remaining policemen at the corner of Fifteenth-st, and Irving Place, where he and his detective also stood. As the captain reached the spot he noticed a youth of fifteen standing on the corner, apparently as a lookout. It was understood that the youth was to signal the approach of police to another lookout, who was watching him from a window of the boarding-house. The lookout at the house, upon a signal from the youth, was to give the alarm to those in the poolroom. The young lookout was seized by a detective and pulled into a doorway of the Irving Place Theatre before he could signal to his fellow-lookout.

Detective Rink then walked toward the boarding-house on the same side of the street upon Women's doubles: Preliminary round-Miss Kobbe | which it is, while Captain Smith walked slowly door was opened he kept his foot against it, while Captain Smith stepped into the middle of the street and waved his straw hat. This was the signal for all the policemen and detectives to make a rush to following summary: the house from opposite directions. As soon as Captain Smith waved his hat he sprang up the stoop and joined Detective Rink.

A minute later the police reserves swarmed into the hallway. A man in his shirt sleeves, who opened the door, was the first person seized. several of the policemen burst open the door of the rear parior, where they found a poolroom in A telegraph operator was sitting at a roll-top desk by a window receiving the results of the races at Iron Hill and Latonia. He was dragged away by a detective before he could tip the operator at the track.

There was no lack of excitement among the cupants of the room when the police broke in. The men ran in all directions looking for a loophole to escape through, but only two of them managed to get away by jumping from a rear managed to get away by window and over a backyard fence. A third tried to follow them through the window, but was hauled back by one of the detectives. A number of the men dashed upstairs and tried refuge in the rooms of the boarders. They were speedily followed and captured by the policemer The porter of the building, named Edwards, was occupying one of these rooms, and was induiging in the sleep of the just when he was awakened by the advent of one of the fleeing gamblers. Ed wards took him for a burglar, and arose and fell upon the fugitive, and in the few seconds which elapsed before the officer appeared, he pummelled the fleeing gambler severely.

Eugene and Hugo Hanf, sons of the proprietress of the boarding-house, entered while the raid was in progress, and were promptly arrested, in spite of their protests that they knew nothing of the existence of the poolroom. They said that they had merely called at the house to see their sister. A charter was found in the desk that was issued by Justice Andrews on June 11 to "The Maiden Ciub."

It was supposed to be incorporated for the purpose of 'providing mutual benefit, pleasure and enjoyment of members in literary, scientific, mathematical and athletic objects."

At the station the Hanf brothers were charged with maintaining the poolroom. Eugene Hanf gave his age as twenty-three, and residence as No. 104 East Fifteenth-st. Hugo Hanf said that he was twenty-eight years old and lived at No. 10 Union Square. The latter place was visited by Captain Smith, who suspected that another poolroom was running there, but no evidence was found.

The other prisoners were registerel as follows: Samuel Stern, aged thirty-seven, gambler, No. 1.047 Winfield-ave., Jersey City; Louis J. Monio, aged thirty-five, vocalist, No. 206 West Forty-sixth-st.; David Goldberg, aged twenty-eight, drummer, No. 1.047 Lexington-ave; Frank Sassone, aged twenty-nine, clerk, No. 115 St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn; Jesse Harris, aged twenty-three, salesman, of No. 79 East Tenth-st.; Thomas Kelly, aged twenty-seven, printer, No. 28 Wyckoff-st., Hoboken, George Colder, aged nineteen, No. 218 Harrison-st., Brooklyn; Frederick J. Mr. Talmage, the bathing-master of Easthampton, is regarded as somewhat of a hero on account of the assistance he gave to four young people who were caught in a "sea puss" while bathing yesterday morning. They were Miss Bessle Irwin, Brooklyn; Miss Washburn and Miss Ireland, Brooklyn: Miss Washburn and Miss Ireland, of New-York and Mr. Maverick, of St. Louis. The four were being carried out when the bathing-master discovered their peril and went to their assistance. He first got Maverick, then Miss Washburn, Miss Irwin and Miss Ireland. The latter was able to swim, and requested that the others be ta'n ashore before her. Although the danger was not great when they were discovered, they undoubtedly would have got beyond the reach of assistance had not the "thing-master ected as soon as he did.

AN OUTING WITH ATHLETIC GAMES. THE MACY MUTUAL AID SOCIETY HAS ITS FOURTH

ANNUAL PICNIC AT ULMER PARK. Macy Mutual Aid Society, of the R. H. Macy & Co. store, held its fourth annual athletic games and picnic at Ulmer Park, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon and evening. It was the largest and most successful outing which the employes of this about 1,000 employes and their friends witnessed the athletic games and indulged in surf-bathing and boating. By evening fully 2,000 people were assem-bled and engaged in dancing and other festivities beneath the brightly lighted trees.

The greatest interest centred in the athletic games, divided between those for employes exclusively and those which were open to all comers. These games were made particularly interesting because of the valuable prizes which were offered, and many wellother sidewalk. When Rink reached known athletes from New-York, Brooklyn and New-Jersey were entered. These prizes consisted New-Jersey were entered. These prizes consisted of clocks, plano lamps, banjos, watches and other articles of value. The track was not in good condition, but many creditable performances were recorded.

PECULIAR CUSTOMS ORSERVED BY A PARTY OF MAHOMETANS AT CONEY ISLAND.

There was a funeral yesterlay morning in the Streets of Cairo, Coney Island, which, for its many peculiarities, was something never before witnessed at Coney Island. Although a funeral, one would suppose it was a sort of celebration, had not the body been in full view.

Ben Mossol, a member of the Mahometan tribe, who was thirty years old, died on Friday in the Kings County Hospital, and it was over his body that the services were held. He belonged to a tribe of musicians and dancers who sailed from Algiers on June 20 for this country. Before leaving his native land he sustained an injury to his foot which caused blood poisoning. He had to be removed to the hospital, where he succumbed.

His body was taken to the place where his company is, and the funeral began at 7 o'clock in the pany is, and the funeral began at 7 o'clock in the morning. Chief Sifidol, a snake charmer, acted as the master of ceremonies. The body was removed from the coffin and placed on a bier. Over the corpse was then thrown a white robe and a white turban was placed on Mosso's head. About forty persons were grouped about the body, and the members of the tribe thumped tomtoms and other musical instruments. Many of the women chanted a weird funeral dirge. All the mourners were clad in the costume of their native country. Chief Sifidol burned costume of their native country. Chief Sifidoi burned some incense after the women had gotten through with their chanting. This took place on two white bricks that had been placed at the head of the bier. When the linense had gone out the body was replaced in the coffin. Then the men and women began to deposit cake, fruit and nuts in the coffin beside the body. The interpreter explained that this was to keep Mossoi from becoming hungry while he was making his journey across the "Golden River." The coffin was then placed in a hearse and was removed to the Gravesend Cemetery. It was followed by the mourners, all chanting and playing musical instruments. At the grave, before the body was placed in the excavation, there was another ceremony. After the chief had offered a prayer more cake, fruit and nuts were laid beside the body.

PROSPERITY AT MANHATTAN. THE SEASON BEATING THE RECORD-ALL TEL ATTRACTIONS DRAWING CROWDS.

The various amusement places at Manhattan Beach remain in unusual prosperity. Never in the history of the seaside theatre was its season so successful as it has been this year. This good fortune proceeds from two causes. The theatrical term ended in the city by hot weather, is continued by the general coolness of Manhattan Beack, It has been proven by the experiences of our vaudeville managers that so long as audiences can be mad comfortable in the theatre they will support in performances liberally, and in order to maintain this comfort and its attendant profit, roof gardens were built. But no invention of this kind can equal the natural advantages of the Manhattan Theatra which is open on all sides to the ocean breeze and is perpetually cool in hot and humid weather. This circumstance and its inevitable results have developed the seaside auditorium into an artistic importance which was hardly meditated in its original inal design. The Manhattan Theatre was at fire intended only as a concert casino for the music of Gilmore's Band. But presently its advantages as a summer theatre for comic opera, barlesque and ex-travaganza were discovered by E. E. Rice. The manager saw that an average of half a million peo ple went to Manhattan every week during the ho nonths, and he argued that a certain proportion these visitors would enjoy more elaborate entertal ment than could be furnished in an orchestral of cert. But although this plan was merely a summi venture, Rice had managerial wisdom enough b make it as noteworthy in interest of bill and excel lence of performance as if he had undertaken New-York engagement in the height of the dramatic The revival of "1492" at Manhattan last sur was in all particulars as artistic as that which car-ried the piece into applause at the Garden Theatre, and better in every way than the original perform ance at Palmer's. Similarly this year the reviva of "Evangeline" has been accomplished with the greatest care in the collection of a company, in scenic effect and costuming. So confident was he of success in his venture that $15,000 was spent in scenic effect and costuming. So confident was he of success in his venture that $15,000 was spent in the production alone, and, what with advertising and other incidentals, Rice had invested nearly 25, 600 before the curtain was lifted on his work. The cool weather of June made the return of this more problematical. But the opera has been running for six weeks now, most of the time to profitable business, and on Saturdays to average receipts of £03, 100 series has already paid the cost of its perent elaborate revival, and, as the most profitable part of the summer has now arrived, the manager has good reason to expect that he will make a fortune out of his venture.

Sousa's orchestra, like Rice's company, is intent on making an artistic record this year, and the bandmaster is busy night and day rehearsing his players for the concerts. The concert scanon has players for the concerts are not a new march next white, for instead of writing scores he is now playing them as they have never been played before.

The salt atmosphere at the beach is having them as they have never been played before.

The salt atmosphere at the beach is having the circus pavilion they seemed more of less distinctive with the spirit and dash of schoolboys out on a vacation. During their first performance at the circus pavilion they seemed more of less distinctive week of affairs was only a matter of one performance, and now they are as happy and feel as much at home as they did at the Pleasure Palace.
